

It is safe to provide naloxone to anyone who requests it. Offer to prescribe naloxone to your patients with these risk factors for opioid overdose:

1. High-dose opioid prescription ( $\geq 100$  total morphine milligram equivalents/day)
If you're unsure of a person's total MME per day, use the Health Department's OpioidCalc App. Visit nyc.gov/html/doh/html/mental/MME.html or download at the App Store (iPhone) or Google Play (Android).
2. Chronic opioid therapy ( $\geq 3$  months)
3. Prescribed concurrent opioid and benzodiazepine prescriptions
4. Opioid* misuse/illicit use, including:
  - Current or past history
  - In treatment for opioid use disorder (e.g., methadone, buprenorphine, naltrexone, treatment without pharmacotherapy)
  - Opioid overdose history
5. Family member or friend of an individual who meets criteria

**Refers to all opioid drug types (e.g., opioid analgesic prescription, heroin) and all routes of administration (e.g., injection drug use, oral, intranasal)*
