

CHAPTER 4.R

IRREVERSIBLE AND IRRETRIEVABLE COMMITMENT OF RESOURCES

There are several resources that would be expended in the operation of the Mosquito Population Control Program in the Rockaways. These resources include the consumption of fuel in the form of gas and electricity consumed during operations, and the human effort required to plan and implement the components of the program. They are considered irretrievably committed because their reuse for some other purpose than the project would be highly unlikely. ☞
