About the NYCHVS

Every three years, the NYC Housing and Vacancy Survey interviews thousands of New Yorkers to better understand the needs and experiences of residents in every community. The survey is conducted by US Census Bureau for the City of New York. The information is used by elected officials, academic researchers, and community advocates.

Why it's important

We need to hear from you to understand New Yorkers' challenges this past year. Your answers to the survey represent hundreds of other New Yorkers like you. Together with information from others in your community, your contribution will help make important decisions to improve our city.

Interviews are safe and private

- Our team follows procedures designed to protect everyone from COVID-19. Both interviewers and you will wear face masks and practice social distancing at all times.
- Our procedures are based on current public health guidance. To see what we are doing now, please visit www.nyc.gov/nychvs/covid
- All of your information will remain strictly confidential and can never be associated directly with you. You may decline to give your name or contact information and skip any questions that you are not comfortable answering.

How you can help

- It's easy to be a part of the 2021 NYCHVS. You'll be interviewed for about 30 minutes during a convenient time at your home. If you prefer, we can work with you to find another location. Remember, only New Yorkers who have been selected can participate in the NYCHVS.
- The NYCHVS speaks your language and can conduct your interview in any language you wish.
- All New Yorkers can participate in the NYCHVS. If you require a modification or accommodation, please reach out to us at the number below.
