

Table G-2: Designation of Parks, Cemeteries and Airports and Suppression of 2000 Census Tract Data in Maps.

Questions often arise regarding parks, cemeteries and other "joint interest areas" that have population.

1. Sometimes there is legitimate population, as in the case of custodians or caretakers who may live on-site, or homeless persons.
2. In some cases, a census tract that is almost totally a joint interest area has a segment with actual housing units. If mapped, this is not representative of the entire tract, but is otherwise legitimate.
3. Finally, due to geographic misallocation, population counts are erroneously assigned to these tracts.

For a more visually accurate depiction of the city, we have chosen to suppress population counts for selected census tracts. The table below lists the census tracts that have been suppressed and the 1990 and 2000 population.
