Follow all instructions on the Special Circumstances Guide that pertain to you when you complete your "Application for Examination."

THE TEST:

You will be given a multiple-choice test at a computer terminal. Your score on this test will be used to determine your place on an eligible list. You must achieve a score of at least 70% to pass the test. The multiple-choice test may include questions which may require the use of any of the following abilities:

Written Comprehension: understanding written sentences and paragraphs. Example: A Special Officer might use this ability when reviewing a report.

Written Expression: using English words or sentences in writing so that others will understand. Example: A Special Officer may use this ability when creating an incident report and recording daily logs.

Memorization: remembering information, such as words, numbers, pictures and procedures. Pieces of information can be remembered by themselves or with other pieces of information. Example: A Special Officer might use this ability when recalling details for an unusual occurrence report.

Problem Sensitivity: being able to tell when something is wrong or is likely to go wrong. It includes being able to identify the whole problem as well as elements of the problem. Example: A Special Officer may use this ability when preserving the peace, or providing assistance to the sick, injured, or mentally and physically disabled.

Deductive Reasoning: applying general rules to specific problems and coming up with logical answers. It involves deciding if an answer makes sense. Example: A Special Officer might use this ability when deciding if an individual caught vandalizing property should be arrested.

Inductive Reasoning: combining separate pieces of information, or specific answers to problems, to form general rules or conclusions. It involves the ability to think of possible reasons for why things go together. Example: A Special Officer may use this ability to discourage loiterers and disorderly persons.

Information Ordering: following correctly a rule or set of rules or actions in a certain order. The rule or set of rules used must be given. The things or actions to be put in order can include numbers, letters, words, pictures, procedures, sentences, and mathematical or logical operations. Example: A Special Officer might use this ability when deciding the next appropriate action to take when providing medical assistance to an individual who is physically injured.

Spatial Orientation: is the ability to tell where you are in relation to the location of some object or to tell where the object is in relation to you. Example: A Special Officer may use this ability to clock rounds and control vehicular traffic on grounds and/or premises.

Visualization: is the ability to imagine how something would look when it is moved around or when its parts are moved or rearranged. It requires the forming of mental images of how patterns or objects would look after certain changes, such as unfolding or rotation. One has to predict how an object, set of objects, or pattern will appear after the changes have been carried out. Example: A Special Officer might use this ability when being asked to compare a photo of a crime scene when testifying in court.
