Access to clean drinking water is the right of every New Yorker. The Department of Design and Construction works with the Department of Environmental Protection to install pipe connections that keep water flowing. Every day, these connections support the 125-mile journey New York City's water makes to 9 million customers.