

DOC's latest recruits gathered for a two-day orientation before academy training at Queens College this week. At the event, Chief Murphy informed the hopeful new recruits that "You will be part of returning the New York City Department of Correction to its place as a leader in the country." Orientation included a review of health care and pension benefits, union membership, the recruit handbook, uniform specifications and more.

This information comes to you from the Office of Public Information