

Clients Meet with Employers at HRA Job Fair

On Friday, November 4, HRA’s Business Link program brought 143 pre-screened HRA clients who have associates degrees or above to 123 Williams St. to meet with 63 employers from growth industries. HRA clients were given the opportunity to share their resumes and apply for over 1,000 available positions.

Before meeting with employers, clients attended an orientation which covered topics like interviewing skills, appropriate questions to ask at a job fair, self-presentation skills, and more to increase their chances of employment success.

Sixty-one percent of attendees were selected for interviews during the job fair, and are waiting to hear back about hiring decisions.

A client meets with employers at the job fair

A client fills out an application form

HRA Business Link’s job fair team

Business Link, a subset of the HRA’s Employment Services division, aims to offer New Yorkers in need a range of options to help them find the opportunities they are best suited for, which will lead to long-term success. Besides entry-level positions in industries with the potential for growth and advancement, Employment Services works with partners to provide job training and education opportunities so clients can improve their earning potential.

Visit Business Link’s website here.