After lengthy Board discussion, the following amended resolution was adopted: 30-5-1-0.

WHEREAS, Stellar Management has applied to construct, maintain, and use vaults under the public sidewalks on West 97th Street and Columbus Avenue as part of the cellars under 808 Columbus Avenue, which will have retail and garage uses; and

WHEREAS, Stellar Management has stated that these vaults will be used for a small expansion of retail space and garage usage; and

WHEREAS, Stellar Management has met many times with Community Board 7/Manhattan as well as residents of Park West Village, to resolve issues pertaining to their development of the site and surrounding sites, with many issues still to be resolved; and

WHEREAS, Stellar Management warrants that they will continue the ongoing dialogue with CB7 and the Park West Village community, to discuss and resolve issues including, but not limited to:

a) construction hours and noise
b) dust amelioration
c) parking issues
d) resolution of the through-street
e) venting of the garage
f) truck loading/unloading of Whole Foods at 97th Street loading dock
g) access to the Bloomingdale branch of the NY Public Library
h) replacement of any street trees lost during or after construction; and

WHEREAS, CB7 is extremely concerned about the loading dock issues, believing there are traffic and possibly safety problems unless the trucks are housed wholly within the new complex, as well as issues dealing with the William F. Ryan Health Center, located on West 97th Street, and calls on Stellar Management to revise their loading/unloading plans to include total within-building loading docks, or underground loading and unloading; and

WHEREAS, the traffic and loading/unloading issues at the 100th Street end of the project remain unresolved, including the tenancy of the other large retail store; and

WHEREAS, there will be other buildings on the east side of Columbus Avenue associated with this development, creating their own retail/traffic/loading/unloading problems, as well as a new building and vault application on the east side of Amsterdam Avenue, all associated with this development; and

WHEREAS, many aspects of this entire project have not as yet been presented and prudent planning for the entire site would have been preferable to piece-meal applications for one or more sites; and

WHEREAS, CB7 remains extremely concerned about the numbers and sizes of the curb cuts on both 97th and 100th Streets, particularly with respect to pedestrian safety issues, as well as congestion on both streets should emergency vehicles need access; and

WHEREAS, CB7 nevertheless recognizes the spirit of Stellar’s recent efforts in cooperation and dialogue with both the CB7 and the community;
BE IT RESOLVED THAT Community Board 7/Manhattan disapproves the application for usage and maintenance of the vaults under Columbus Avenue and 97th Street, unless, within 30 days, the developer presents a memorandum of understanding satisfactory to CB7 for (1) loading and unloading of trucks and (2) the rooftop venting of the retail space and garage uses; and if such an enforceable agreement is presented to and accepted by CB7’s Steering Committee (at its regularly scheduled meeting on May 29, 2007), Community Board 7/Manhattan hereby approves the application; and

The CB 7 Youth Education and Libraries Committee met on May 17, 2007 at Lincoln Center.

CB 7 has received so far 5 filled out Survey responses to the joint YEL/HHS AIDS Education Survey: P.S. 84, P.S. 163, P.S. 199, M.S. 44, M.S. 243. Ben Howard Cooper had volunteered to do follow-up phone calls to principals who had not responded 3 weeks after the original mailing.

The remainder of the meeting was dedicated to a discussion of the District Needs Statement for 2008-09 under “Community Development, Youth and Education”.

Community Development: there is a continuing need for out-of-school funding from DYCD for before- and after-school programming. DYCD had cut funding in the present FY for CD 7, except for two low-income census tracts, covering the Douglas Houses and the Amsterdam Houses. It was noted that the Upper West Side no longer has a zoned high school due to the new H.S. Choice program. The Committee believes that the City should maintain and/or increase funding for CBO’s serving census tracts with concentrated numbers of high-needs children and youth.

Day Care and Head Start: Bloomingdale would seem to have available slots and is seeking students. We need to do outreach to local Non-Profits such as Montessori, St. Timothy-St. Matthews, YMCA, Grosvenor, and Goddard-Riverside.

After-School Programs: CBO’s need funding for space and facilities for specialized programs (e.g., summer programs have to rent space in public schools, unlike during the school year). Some related issues are the lack of air-conditioning in Schools during the summer and the fact that some P.S.’s may be under renovation during the summer months. H.S. students are hard to motivate to participate in summer programs because of the pressures to work and because some activities may not interest them as much. West Side YMCA has 3 programs but cannot get access to Ethical Culture’s space during the summer. But could use Brandeis H.S., if there was funding for rent. Goddard Riverside has used P.S. 84’s yard/field; but may have to cut their program unless they are able to secure another field.

Youth Employment: CD 7 faces the same issues as faced re. community development, i.e., cuts beyond the two low-income census tracts. Many of the same CBO’s mentioned above face cuts in their funding. One possible alternative is getting Lincoln Center and the various museums in CD 7 to contract low-income teens to work in the summer, especially if they are receiving public funds for their renovations or their operations. In general, there is a need to expand youth employment slots for low-income teens living in CD 7.

Meeting was adjourned at 9:00 PM.

The meeting was called to order at 7:00 P.M.

Mr. Simon invited the Committee’s two guests -- John Sheridan and Richard Bass of Herrick, Feinstein -- to explain the recent Court of Appeals decision on the survival of use restrictions mandated by the Urban Development Action Area Act and their roles in the decision. Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Bass offered the following summary:

- 328 Owners Corp. (the “Co-op”) – represented by Herrick, Feinstein -- learned that the adjoining property, 330 West 86th Street (the “Property”) had been purchased by a Developer -- 330 West 86th Street, LLC. The Developer planned to tear down the building on the Property and erect a “sliver” apartment building, some 15 stories high or higher.

- In resulting litigation, it was the position of both the Co-op and the City of New York that the Developer’s planned project violated both the Urban Development Action Area Act ("UDAA Act") and the express restrictions in the Deed in which the Property had originally been conveyed from the City. Here is what happened:

  - The City acquired the Property in tax foreclosure proceedings sometime before June, 1999. The Property was in disrepair and in need of rehabilitation.
  - The City, through the Department of Housing Preservation and Development ("HPD"), determined that the Property could appropriately be sold as an Urban Development Action Area Project ("UDAAP"). Under this program, if the Property was to be used only for certain purposes set forth in the UDAA Act, the Property could be sold without the usually-required procedure of a public auction or sealed bids.
  - Pursuant to the UDAAP program, the City notified the remaining tenants of the Property (who only occupied a few apartments in the building) that the Property could be sold to them through HPD’s Asset Sales Program at the remarkable price of $340,000.
  - Seizing the opportunity, the tenants offered to buy the Property under the UDAAP program, and the City went about getting the approvals it needed to sell the Property under the UDAA Act.
  - Specifically, the matter was presented to the City Council, which, in a resolution issued in 1999, approved the designation of the Property as a UDAAP, approved the designation of the tenants’ corporation as a “sponsor” under the UDAA Act, and mandated that the Property could be developed upon the terms and conditions set forth in a required “Project Summary.” That Project Summary described the purpose of the Project as “Conservation.”
  - The matter was then presented to the Mayor’s office, which, in reliance on the City Council resolution, also approved the designation of the Property as a UDAAP and the designation of the tenants’ corporation as a “sponsor” under the applicable statute.
The Property was then conveyed to the tenants’ corporation (“Sponsor”) -- for a price of only $340,000 -- without public auction or sealed bid.

The Deed specifically stated that the “project to be undertaken by Sponsor (“Project”) consists solely of the rehabilitation or conservation of existing private or multiple dwellings or the construction of one to four unit dwellings without any change in land use permitted by existing zoning.”

The Deed also specifically required, among other things, that Sponsor correct all the Code violations of the building and give two-year leases to the existing tenants in the building.

The Sponsor did not correct the building’s Code violations.

The Sponsor did not do anything to rehabilitate or conserve the Property.

Instead, within 18 months of its purchase from the City at a bargain price, the Sponsor “flipped” the Property to the Developer for a price of over $1,000,000.

Significantly, the Developer took with actual knowledge of the objections of the City and the Co-op to its proposed development. A “lis pendens” had been filed on the Property before the Developer closed its deal with the Sponsor.

The Developer did not correct the building Code violations or otherwise rehabilitate or conserve the Property.

The Developer proposed to demolish the building on the Property and to erect an apartment building of 15-stories or higher.

Developer sought to sell the Property for $7,350,000.

In the resulting litigation, which is captioned “328 Owners Corp. v. 330 West Oaks Corp., et al., Index No. 604570/00,” the Co-op and the City sought to prevent the Developer from building its proposed project and to force it to comply with the restrictions on the Property in the Deed and by statute, as the Property was conveyed by the City.

The Co-op and the City prevailed at the trial court level, and that court held that the Property “may not be used other than for (a) rehabilitation or conservation of the existing building thereon, or (b) construction of one to four unit dwellings without any change in land use ....” The Developer appealed, and in a 3-2 split decision, the Appellate Division reversed. That Court held that the restrictions in the Deed did not “run with the land” and did not preclude the Developer from building the high rise sliver building it proposed. The two dissenting justices rejected the majority’s reasoning, stating that the majority’s ruling, “rather than effectuating the legislative intent of the [UDAA Act] program, perpetuates a fraud against the public fisc.”

The Co-op and the City were entitled to appeal the Appellate Division’s decision as of right to the New York Court of Appeals -- the highest Court in the State – and they did so.

The Co-op and the City made the following arguments in the Court of Appeals and prevailed:

The plain language of the Deed, as well as the surrounding circumstances, make clear that when the City conveyed the Property to Sponsor, those parties intended that the Property would be a UDAAP and would be developed only as permitted by the UDAA Act. The Deed also makes clear that those were covenants that were to “run with the land,” which means that those restrictions would apply to Sponsor, to Developer, and to anyone else to whom the Property was conveyed.

· The Deed must be construed in accordance with the intent of the parties to that Deed. The case law holds that the document must be viewed as a whole and that no magic words need be used to create restrictive covenants. Further, the fact that nearly all the references to the UDAA Act and its requirements occur in the “recital” clauses of the Deed, rather than in the “habendum” clause, does not override the parties’ intention.

· The requirements of the UDAA Act must be construed into the Deed. The City’s only authority to convey the Property without the usual procedure of public auction or sealed bids stems from the UDAA Act. Unless the statutory requirements are read into the Deed, the deed is null and void. This is because the City had no authority to convey the Property unless the uses of the Property were limited to either (i) “Conservation” as stated in the Project Summary, or at a minimum, (ii) the statutory restrictions of “(a) rehabilitation or conservation of the existing building thereon, or (b) construction of one to four unit dwellings without any change in land use ....”

Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Bass noted that they had referred to the resolution adopted by CB7 on this matter when arguing before the Court of Appeals and that the resolution had been valuable as a formal expression of the views of the CB, which had previously given its approval to the disposal of the property under the UDAA Act.

We collectively discussed the shortcomings of the deed that the City Law Department used in this transaction and the need for improved drafting in the future. We also discussed the risk that other properties conveyed under the UDAA Act could attempt similar impermissible sales and the fact that this Court of Appeals decision strengthened our hands in doing so.

We decided that we should condition our approval of any future conveyances under the UDAA Act or similar mechanisms on the inclusion of appropriate binding language in the conveying deed.

We also decided that we should send a letter to Mr. Cardozo, Corporation Counsel, and to HPD to present our views on this matter and to request a list of all properties that have been conveyed in CB7 under the UDAA Act or similar mechanisms, so that CB7 may help to monitor whether the conditions of their conveyance are being complied with and whether any future sales of these properties are proper. Mr. Simon agreed to draft this letter for the Committee’s review.

At this point, we thanked our guests for their time and information and bid them good night. We then turned our attention to our District’s Needs statement and our deadline to submit additions or changes to those needs. Helen Rosenthal was very helpful with guiding us through the process.

The meeting adjourned at 8:09 P.M.

In addition to those present, telephone suggestions were called in by Cynthia Dial, Project Find; Erica Teutsch, Goddard Riverside Senior Center; and Rev Heidi Neumark, Trinity Lutheran Church.

In preparation for the Committee’s District Needs Statement, community leaders were invited to the meeting to share their thinking on what the needs of the community were. It was emphasized in the invitation that we were not looking for agency budgets or programs, but rather what gaps they observed in their work in the community.

The following is a compilation of concerns:

The Ryan Center, whose programs in the Health Department building on 100th Street were being displaced by training programs for city-wide activities, was concerned by the lack of space available for service programs, in view of the high marketability of rental space. This was seen as a general problem.

The plight of immigrants, and particularly of undocumented workers was a high concern for everyone. Exploitation by employers and landlords is rampant, with individuals fearful to complain for fear they may be deported. It is a particularly difficult problem, as advocates for the immigrants are often concerned that they not do anything to create new problems. It was thought that a concerted effort should be made to consider how this population could best be served. At the present time they are primarily connected to faith communities, and to the few immigration programs in the community, where there is counseling, ESL classes, and help with immigration problems, as well as a sense of community. It was suggested that there be a meeting pulling together faith communities, and other concerned groups, to determine a possible course of action on the Upper West Side.

Inequities in the public school system, where children in the same school building may receive a different quality of education, both when they are labeled as different schools, and when they are separated on the basis of intelligence levels into gifted and ungifted groupings. It was recognized that children had different ways of learning, but each child should receive optimal teaching. The elimination of School Boards has greatly diminished the ability for advocates for a better education system to come together.

Lack of appropriate sex education in the schools was also a concern, as well as failure to use peer programs in prevention education for STDs. Asthma and lead paint poisoning among children were concerns. Childhood obesity was seen as contributed to by the poor physical education programs in the schools.

Affordable Day Care Centers were identified as a gap. The working poor are often ineligible for the program, which have a very low cap on income.

Lack of Health Care Coverage for too many people. Support for family and child health care is essential.

Growing disparity between rich & poor in the district and the need for more attention to the loss of community. More activities are needed to bring all residents together. There was concern that the West Side was losing its special quality of concern for the whole community, and nothing was being done to address the issue.

More affordable housing for all populations was seen as essential. Excessive development of luxury condos and elimination of housing for the poor and middle class is destroying the quality of life on the West Side.

There was concern about gang activity around playgrounds in the upper part of the district. Boys have been unable to play basketball because they are beaten up if they don’t belong to a gang or to the wrong one.

SENIORS

There was concern on different levels for the aging population on the West Side. Much thought was given to amenities which would make the community a good place for people to live out their lives. Public fitness centers and/or exercise in the parks, such as tai chi. Public swimming pools Connection to technology for seniors. (It was thought Gale Brewer would be particularly interested in this.) Education programs at the local institutions, - Columbia, John Jay, Fordham, Bard, et al. at a rate people on a low income can afford. Benches throughout the community to enable walking and shopping. Health fairs for the general public. Education for grandparents who now have the care of their grandchildren, as well as for parents. Some of these programs may already exist, but they are not well publicized.

More mental health programs to deal with depression among the elderly are needed, and are being recommended by Councils of Mental Health Agencies.

There was also concern for the isolated elderly who had no connections to resources, and who had little contact with others people. Agencies believe they provide meaningful services to their clients, but they do not have the resources to reach people who do not know about them. St Luke’s has a program providing doctor’s home visits to the elderly unable to come in to the hospital, but people have to know about the program. The problem has to be taken on as a community-wide project. Several people recommended that the unions of building superintendents, (32B), be involved. Their members could probably identify people needing help, but may not know where to refer them, and may not feel comfortable doing so. Working to familiarize them with resources is one avenue. Faith communities often may be the one social outlet for older people, and those groups should also be involved in any discussion of solutions. It was suggested that a community-wide meeting be held comprising all the groups which might be concerned, including State and City Divisions for the Aging, and the United Hospital Fund. There was consensus that this was a good idea and should be followed up on.

HOMELESS

There were various dimensions to the problem of homelessness. Some people have had a stable home for many years, but are now being threatened with eviction because only one spouse’s name was on the lease, and that person is now dead. Others have been sent eviction notices by landlords who hope the tenants don’t realize there has to be a legal process before they can be evicted. There needs to be a publicized center where people can bring their concerns. The SRO Law Project can help people in SROs, but is not able to serve other tenants.

There are also people who have no homes, and are sometimes placed in the community by City agencies without any planning or long-range goals. Agencies should work with the community to make placements that don’t serve to antagonize existing residents. There needs to be more education of the community as to who needs special housing, and how people can work together instead of being fearful of someone who might not be like them. The Supportive Housing Network of New York is interested in developing such a program.

HUNGER

Hunger is increasing. More people coming for emergency food. Only 65% of eligible get food stamps. (SEE NYC Food Bank web site). Outreach to the eligible is needed. The City is planning this, and can use the support of community groups.

The meeting was adjourned, with the recognition that there were many areas for the community to work together on, and we hadn’t addressed all of them tonight. At its next meeting, the Committee will work on our actual District Needs Statement, taking into account tonight’s concerns, our last District Needs Statement (Fiscal Year 2008) and any other items that may be brought to our attention.
