Pursuant to Section 3020.8(b) of the City Charter, the City Planning Commission shall submit to the City Council a report with respect to the relation of any designation by the Landmarks Preservation Commission, whether of a historic district or a landmark, to the Zoning Resolution, projected public improvements, and any plans for the development, growth, improvement or renewal of the area involved.

On October 9, 2012, the Landmarks Preservation Commission (LPC) designated the East Village/Lower East Side Historic District (Designation List No. 460, LP-2491). The Historic District encompasses part or all of 15 blocks located between the Bowery/Third Avenue and Avenue A, and between East 2nd Street and St. Mark's Place in Manhattan, Community District 3. It consists of approximately 325 buildings.

Development in this area of Manhattan began to take shape during the 1830s when unprecedented growth pushed the limits of the city northward and briefly made these and other nearby blocks one of New York's most prestigious residential neighborhoods. Second Avenue in particular became a favored location for fashionable residential construction, and many speculatively-built, single-family homes were commissioned along its lower lengths. By the 1850s large numbers of immigrants began to settle in the area as wealthier residents moved farther uptown. Row houses were increasingly converted to multiple-family dwellings and boardinghouses, and, later, new, purpose-built tenements began to replace the earlier building stock. These buildings, known as "pre-law" tenements because they predated the Tenement House Act of 1879, were often designed in a simplified version of the Italianate style. Later structures from the early 1870s show the growing influence of the neo-Grec style.

People began to regularly refer to the area as the Lower East Side in the 1890s, when many of the area's established German residents and institutions began to move to other neighborhoods in the city. Newer immigrant groups settled in their place, and the area evolved into a polyglot enclave representing a complex array of national, regional, ethnic, linguistic, and religious identities. This cosmopolitan make-up was reflected in the institutions established during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. These institutions were recognized by such monuments including the Congregation Adas Yisroel Anshe Mezeritz synagogue on East 6th Street in 1910; the Saint Stanislaus Bishop and Martyr Roman Catholic Church, at East 7th Street; the First Hungarian Reformed Church also on East 7th Street; the New York City Mission and Tract Society's Olivet Memorial Church on East 2nd Street, the Middle Collegiate Church on Second Avenue; and the Society of the Music School Settlement on East 3rd Street.

As the Lower East Side's population continued to grow throughout the late 19th century, tenement construction also endured. These buildings were governed by the Tenement House Act of 1879, which mandated the so-called dumbbell plan typical of most "old-law" tenements. At this time, and through the 1880s, the neo-Grec style remained popular, while architects also began using elements of the Queen Anne style. Facades were typically clad in fine red brick with light sandstone ornament. By the 1890s tenement design had reached its pinnacle of flamboyance. In addition to the Queen Anne style, the organic Romanesque Revival and the Classically-inspired Renaissance Revival also gained favor.

The early 20th century saw another significant change to the area. New tenements, many of the “new-law” variety built following the Tenement House Act of 1901, began to be built, along with apartment houses, and other commercial and institutional buildings. In the early 1910s Second Avenue became the most important entertainment district for the city’s Jewish immigrant community—leading many to call the area the Yiddish Rialto. Vestiges of that era can be seen in the facades of the Public Theatre and the Lowe’s Commodore.

The early 1930s and the Great Depression widely halted building activity, and most of the structures within the historic district from that period have remained largely intact. In the following decades, however, neighborhood demographics underwent a dramatic transformation. Latin American immigrants, especially those from Puerto Rico, established a large community in the East Village during the mid 20th century. The area was also being discovered by artists and bohemians moving eastward from Greenwich Village, leading realtors to call the neighborhood the Village East, and eventually, the East Village.

The East Village/Lower East Side remains one of the most storied neighborhoods in New York City, and in the nation. It is synonymous with the American immigrant experience, and more recently, with social activism and the artistic avant-garde; it has served as a nationally-recognized cultural center for more than a century and a half. The blocks within the East Village/Lower East Side Historic District traditionally contained the area’s most substantial structures and its finest architecture, as well as many of its most important institutions. To this day they exhibit a dense layering of historic and cultural significance, and collectively the buildings within the district tell this enduring, vibrant neighborhood’s rich story—from its early history as a fashionable residential neighborhood, to its subsequent identities as the tenement districts of Kleindeutschland and Lower East Side, through its heyday as the entertainment center of the Yiddish Rialto, and during its more recent evolution into the East Village of Bohemians and punks, Off-Broadway theaters and community activist groups.

The Historic District is within the area of Community District 3 in Manhattan. This Historic District is zoned R8B in the midblocks between Third Avenue/the Bowery and Avenue A; C6-2A on Second Avenue between East 1st and East 2nd Streets; R7A/C1-5 on Second Avenue, First Avenue and Avenue A between East 7th Street and St. Mark's Place; and R7A/C2-5 on Second Avenue, First Avenue and Avenue A between East 7th Street and East 2nd Street. Both R7A and R8B zoning districts allow residential and community facility uses with a maximum FAR of 4.0. R7A districts are contextual districts with required streetwall bases between 40 and 65 feet, with maximum overall building limits of 80 feet. R8B districts are contextual districts with required streetwall bases between 55 and 60 feet, with maximum overall building height limits of 75 feet. C6-2A districts are contextual districts with required streetwall bases between 60 and 85 feet, with maximum overall building height limits of 120 feet; C6-2A districts allow commercial FAR up to 6.0, residential FAR up to 6.02 and community facility up to 6.5.

On June 26, 2012, the Landmarks Preservation Commission held a public hearing on the proposed designation of the Historic District (Item No. 1). The hearing had been duly advertised in accordance with the provision of law. Thirty-seven witnesses spoke in favor of the designation as proposed, including the Manhattan Borough President, local City Councilmember, and representatives of elected officials from the New York State Senate and Assembly. Representatives of the Bowery Alliance of Neighbors, City Lore, Cooper Square Community Development Committee and Businessmen's Association, East Village Community Coalition, the Greenwich Village Society for Historic Preservation, the Historic Districts Council, Lower East Side Preservation Initiative, Metropolitan Chapter of the Victorian Society in America, New York Landmarks Conservancy, the Society for the Architecture of the City and several residents also spoke in support of the designation. Sixteen people spoke in opposition to designation or in opposition to including their property within the historic district, including several property owners, as well as representatives of the Cathedral of the Holy Virgin Protection (four representatives), Catholic Worker Movement, Real Estate Board of New York, Saint Stanislaus Bishop and Martyr Roman Catholic Church (two representatives), and St. Mary's American Orthodox Greek Catholic Church. The Commission received hundreds of letters, petitions and electronic correspondence, both in support of, and in opposition to, the proposed designation.

Pursuant to Section 74-79 of the Zoning Resolution, no transfer of development rights is permitted from any structure within an historic district. All landmark buildings within historic districts are eligible to apply for use and bulk waivers pursuant to Section 74-711 of the Zoning Resolution.

CITY PLANNING COMMISSION PUBLIC HEARING

Pursuant to Section 3020.8(a) of the City Charter, the City Planning Commission held a public hearing on November 28, 2012, (Calendar No. 9). There were three speakers in favor of the designation and none opposed. Speakers in favor included representatives of the Greenwich Village Society for Historic Preservation and of the Lower East Side Preservation Initiative, and one unaffiliated neighborhood resident.

CONSIDERATION

The City Planning Commission has evaluated the East Village/Lower East Side Historic District in relation to the Zoning Resolution, projected public improvements and plans for the development, growth and improvements in the vicinity of the area involved. The subject Historic District does not conflict with the Zoning Resolution. In addition, the Commission is not aware of any conflicts between the subject Historic District designation and projected public improvements or any plans for development, growth, improvement, or renewal in the vicinity of the Historic District.
