EDWIN MARSHALL, UPPER MANHATTAN PLANNER, HONORED BY MAYOR BLOOMBERG FOR OUTSTANDING PUBLIC SERVICE.

Edwin Marshall, DCP's Team Leader for Upper Manhattan, was among six city employees recognized by the Mayor for outstanding public service in conjunction with Black History Month. Edwin has been with the city for 26 years. During his 19 years with City Planning, Edwin has worked with HPD and other agencies to renew and rebuild neighborhoods through planning initiatives and the development of affordable housing. Edwin has helped facilitate close to 15,000 affordable housing units in Upper Manhattan through the development and implementation of the Bradhurst Urban Renewal Plan and other projects involving city-owned land. He also helped oversee the Department's East Harlem and Frederick Douglass Boulevard neighborhood rezonings - the first comprehensive neighborhood rezonings in Upper Manhattan in over 40 years -- and he plays a key role in the Department's 125th Corridor Study.

Edwin was honored along with with five other city employees at a reception hosted by Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg on February 6, 2006 at the Malcolm X and Dr. Betty Shabazz Memorial and Educational Center in honor of Black History Month.
