1926 – J. Lamb Ecclesiastical Art Works

1932 – Cornelia Street

THE NEW YORK SUN, THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1930.

The Title Guarantee & Trust Company lent $42,000 additional to J. & R. Lamb, a corporation of which Karl B. Lamb is the vice-president and treasurer, on 323-327 Sixth avenue, 74 feet 1½ inches of frontage, known as the Ecclesiastical Art Works, and the abutting property in the rear at 14-16 Cornelia street, 52¾ feet in width, this being consolidaed with five other mortgages held by the guarantee company to make a single lien of $120,000 to cover all these premises, due according to the bond, according to records filed with the Register's office.

Other Notable Changes

Another interesting operation involving one of the early church edifices in Greenwich Village is under way at 223-27 Sixth Avenue, practically opposite Third Street and extending back to Cornelia Street. The old church, which was built in 1807, was altered many years ago for the ecclesiastical studios of the J. & R. Lamb Company, which moved to Tenafly a few years ago. The old church exterior still remains and it is now being altered for a theatre by the Luxor-Bleecker Amusement Company at an estimated cost of $60,000.
